Outreach

KaLynn Beeter, 27, stopped at Open Door 65 with her son Drew to find clothes for both of them. They've visited several times before. "He's gotten a Bible from here, I got my Bible here. It's a good place," Beeter said.

The two women and others are leaning on the help offered at Open Doors 65, a "store" located at 213 NP Ave. in Fargo, where people can get free clothing and household goods, along with something to eat and drink. It's given a hand to people who are homeless or otherwise down on their luck for about six years.

Now, the store, that is in danger of closing, could use a hand.

Resources have tightened, so the store has had to impose limits on people who come to "shop." Guests used to be able to pick out items every month. Now it is limited to once per quarter because of a lack of some items and lack of volunteer staff,

Space is tight so guests take turns shopping, but they can have a snack and look through stacks of books that are free for the taking while they wait. Each household gets 10 items for free per quarter, plus five additional items per household member. They're always looking for more volunteers, which would allow them to be open more hours.

If you have any household items, clothing, or time you'd like to donate stop by Open Door 65 at 213 NP Ave in Fargo.

Pray for the volunteers and those who use these services.
